6.0 Personal Interest and Passion

I love to participate in social organization and activities. The core study I wish to pursue and explore must be related to social, gender, and humanities studies. I love reading anything related to philosophy (especially questioning about life and life after life), politics, human rights, women's issues, collectivism, cooperative, development, campaign and promotional things. For most of the time I also enjoy the discussion on the particular topics with my colleagues. Writing is also a fundamental way for me to share my idea about anything. I prefer writing poems than anything. I learn about journalism and I can write straight news or depth news.

Team work becomes one of my most important event where I can explore and share my experiences with others and work together productively. I love to work either in group or individually but surely in group would be more interesting and fun.

I am a kind of person who has so many interesting and likes to learn new things. I currently Facilitating with strengths-based approaches. I can meet a lot of people and learn about their personalities. I have abilities to repackage something complex into more simplest and interesting.
